Quite a few clubs were in the market for the services of Piez. The New York Yankees, Washington, St. Louis Nationals, Boston Nationals, and one or two others looked over the lad, and while impressed with his performance feeled, and while impressed with his performances, failed to offer enough to make it interesting for the local management. There is no question but that any one of the Richmonds in the field might have made a good trade had they talked business, but several thought that by waiting until the drafting season they might land him without paying more than the draft price. McGraw was taking no chances, and grabbed him. It is not definitely known what price was paid for Piez, but $1.500 will not be far out of the way.

Having disposed of Piez, it is betraying no confidence to announce that the management expects to close deals for several additional players in the next few days. John Raley, Charlie Strain, Connie Bresnahan and John Mace are on the waiting list. Raley is headed for class AA company, while Strain. Bresnahan and Mace will in all probability find themselves on the pay rolls of big league clubs. John Raley would be grabbed in a minute by the top organizations were he just a few years younger. While he has many days of service left, it is the policy of big league clubs to buy youth.

Concerning Strain, his record for the season is rather interesting. Strain has played in all conceivable positions, and has done well in all, but at pitching his performances have been actually marvelous, when one considers the amount of extra work he has shoved in between the days on the mound. Here's what he has done as a pitcher:

In all, Strain has taken part in sixteen gamse, pitching 91 2-3 innings. He has been called on four times to relieve pitchers in distress, and in each of these four rescue contests the team has lost, though Strain is not credited with the loss, taking hold when the club was hopelessly in the rut. He has been forced to retire twice, being yanked once after pitching onethird of an inning, and another time after going two-thirds of the first frame. Actually, he has won eight games and lost four, giving him a per-centage of .667. In the eight games won, just five runs were made by the opposition. Altogether, it is a record really worth while, and especially noteworthy, since he has been made to do substitute work whenever injuries appeared, and he has always delivered.

Newport News is very anxious to have the games scheduled for July 4 between the Shipbuilders and Roanoke in Roanoke transferred to Newport News, and with very good reason. The series begins July 2, and the argument of the seaside city is that a greater crowd will be obtained there than up among the hills. Secretary Bradley has written to Elmore Heins, secretary of the Roanoke club, suggesting that the game July 2 be played in Roanoke, and that both clubs leave immediately after the game for Newport News. Since all receipts are pooled on holidays, it would be to Roanoke's advantage from a financial standpoint to play in the eastern section of the State. While it is hard to lose a week-end engagement, it is far better to play these games where the most money can be gathered, and Newport News appears to have Roanoke lashed on that question. Just on the service, we should say make the transfer, though it is something for the two clubs to settle between themselves. Roanoke would be deserving of some consideration, and the league would doubtless give the Tigers a bonus that abounding spirit of noblesse oblige, refused; therefore the setting for All About Bill Lipscomb.

In the first death grapple between the Colts and Tigers, of Roanoke, Bill Lipscomb won. Bill won because Roanoke made eight runs, while Richmond made only four.

Bill Lipscomb is ten, and not ashamed of it. Primarily he came into this world as the joy of fond parents. Unwittingly he drifted into the mascotting business, and now tours the world, or that much of it which lies within the boundaries of Virginia, as the most potent jinx-destroying element there is.

We can't help enthusing over Bill. He measures thirty-four inches from feet to beam, wears anomalous hair that can furnish all the alibis in the world regarding a comb, carries peaches and cherries and all the ripe and luscious things in the world in his cheeks, bubbles over with the joy of living, and is—well, he's just a boy. And he handles the big glove very much affected by catchers with all the nonchalance and dexterity of those who have tented beneath the big top and drifted this way again.

who have tented beneath the big top ar And Bill cost is that game. Hereore the details:

Steve Griffin chose Harry Griffin, who pronounced himself fit after his recent illness. Buck Pressly shifted, poked Jap kiffed on the hill. That made a pretty fair combination, with a few exceptions that we'll attempt to note.

Harry Griffin Hit Hard.

Harry was slaughtered during the mire paragraphs for sixteen choice base-advancing knocks. This composite bombardment yielded eight runs, as you might have learned in the opening lines. Jap Effet fared just a triffle better, and succeeded in catching the car downtown with only thirteen safeties charged against his record. The differences between the success which came to Jap and the failure which came to Jap and the fai

The tournament was divided into two classes, and Captain Abeles, of the crimson, won the call in all three cases, taking the west course in every instance. The choice of course is worth casily a length in each race.

Class B finals for men was between to clock the fought their way successfully through a field of thirty contestants. Blair was doped out to win, but Mead, after losting the first set, 1—5, came right back and played a steady and resourceful game, and won the next two sets and the match, 6—4. 6—4.

Class A for women, though not large in numbers, was very classy as to quality, as some of the best women players of the State were contestants. One of the best played matches was between Mrs. Willard Sullivan and Miss Margaret Colston, which, after two excepting and hard fought sets had to be defaulted to Miss Colston on account.

In class B for girls, the final players were Miss Emily Rogerson and Miss was started in the ninth, when John Mace started with a single and finally wended his way across on Steve Grit-

Epitomized, it was a game of lost opportunities, so far as Richmond is concerned. There was a chance in nearly every inning to drive some one around. In the third Harry Griffin started with a triple, but was left lashed to the third hassock. Raley and Bresnahan in the fourth, the two first up, each hit safely, but were margoned through inability of the following ash wielders. In the eighth Raley led off with another hit, but to no effect, and so it went throughout, hit after hit wester, while Roa-noke was making the most of every chance offered with the breaks all going to the Magic City crowd, luci usually following the winning club.

Doc Newton had the distinction of making a record for the home lot. In the sixth he had the honor of retiring all three of the opposing bats-men. It was a great game for those followers of the game who love to see the ball hit hard and often. A total of twenty-nine hits were made for a total of thirty-six bases. Both pitchers had remarkable control and gilt-edge support, but each was hit

Richmond made only four.

This is by no way of finding fault with Bill. He did the very best he could. If the truth must be told, it must be told baldly. There can be no glossing of the rough edges, no flossy veneering to hide the galling facts.

Bill did his best, and Bill is some Bill, verily.

As to the propriety of telling the real truth, we must submit ourself to the tender mercy of the lord-high-keeper of the style sheet. Pulling the shell from beneath the pea, Bill did his derndest. Never for an instant was he shy on the job. He came here, all fifty-two pounds of him, prepared to drive every devotee of the Chesterfieldian philosophy to the neck of Pinners Point for very shame. Briefly, he tried every known method stored in his immature brain to let Richmond take the honors, but Richmond, with that abounding spirit of noblesse oblige, refused; therefore the setting for
